THE GREAT SUBSIDY ARGUMENT

There is no vehemence like that produced in a debate about theory unsupported by facts or experience. Each side is tempted to make exaggerated claims and reach far-fetched conclusions.

This has been the nature, to date, of the great subsidy argument. It has brought into a congressional clash extremists of a highly vocal nature, with both sides determined to fight to the bitter end.

The American public as a whole has nothing to gain and a vast deal to lose by the tactics used in this debate. Under the circumstances, the hard and fast conclusions insisted on by the debaters simply have no proper place in a government devoted to the general welfare.

The statements of both sides have been wide open to challenge on so many points that a rational citizen easily got the impression that both sides must be trying to spoof him. It was bad enough to suspect they were trying to make him believe something that couldn't be proved, and it was worse to suspect they were believing the same things themselves.

In a government of balance and reason, the solution of problems raised by clashes of extremists is to reach a compromise between their positions. In the great subsidy argument, the compromise is to give the government limited authority for the use of subsidies while giving the farm population limited privileges for the obtaining of that greater share of the national income which it claims as its proper share of the war boom. In no other conceivable way can the general welfare be served—and that is, when all is said and done, what the congress and the government of the United States are supposed to be doing.

CONFIDENCE IN PERFORMANCE

The confidence implicit and explicit in the utterances of Admiral Nimitz and Admiral Halsey concerning operations in the Pacific is built on performance. It is vastly different from the bluster which preceded Pearl Harbor and contributed so much to the reprimands which followed that tragic lapse of alertness.

Against obstacles and under handicaps that were theoretically insurmountable, United States fighting forces in the Pacific have stopped the Japanese offensive and gained strong footholds for the beginning of a campaign to close in on the enemy at his strong points. While it continues to be true that public opinion at home has not been brought abreast of the master strategy of the campaign, that perhaps will be corrected in the months immediately ahead as the grand strategy discloses itself.

The strategy apparently is to reduce the Japanese outposts where necessary and, wherever possible, to go behind them. It calls for the imaginative use of air power to lead the way and be followed in close order by naval and land power to secure bases for the further extension of air power. It is not, perhaps, the strategy that the most extreme devotees of air power would choose, but strategy which makes full use of equipment already available for use.

Its success to date is confirmed not only by the presence of United States fighting men at points where Japan failed to hold its advantage but also by the expressed concern of leaders of the Japanese government. They may understand what is coming far better than the people of the United States.

MONEY MANAGEMENT

Emphasis on the buildup for the Fourth War Loan drive, running from Jan. 18 to Feb. 15, will be on sales to individuals. During the first two weeks of the drive, only their purchases of securities will be reported. The quota for individual sales is $5,500,000,000, out of a total quota of $14,000,000,000.

As the war continues the individual's investment of his surplus earnings inevitably becomes more and more a matter of rational investment and less and less a matter of emotional response to sales appeals. Christmas buying this year will reveal to all who have not been aware of the situation previously that there is an acute shortage of values outside of living necessities. The diversion of buying power into securities pending the time when it may be used to highest advantage is a simple matter of prudence.

That has been and will continue to be the strongest sales appeal for investment in government securities. It is clearly the reason for commercial investment in those securities; in the field of money management, emotionalism plays no part whatever. And money management in wartime is as great a personal responsibility as war production, because without it the effect of the production can be cancelled out by inflation.

PRECISION BOMBING NOT DISCREDITED

The too easy deduction that British saturation bombing of Berlin challenges the United States strategy of precision bombing in daylight raids remains unsupported by the record. It is still the judgment of bombing experts of both air forces that the two types of operation are complementary. The American tactic of destroying specific and relatively small strategic targets, with emphasis on exact placement, promises to destroy as much of Germany's war potential in the long run as the night raids of the British, with emphasis on tonnage and general destruction. The British method may do more damage to German morale, but the American method is more damaging to German war production.

Unfortunately, precision bombing depends on proper weather conditions; it cannot be practiced in the kind of weather which helps the British night bombers. From now until spring, according to Undersecretary of War Patterson, our own forces will be relatively inactive. Weather also will slow down the operations of the British as winter closes in. Perhaps that is what the Germans are counting on most heavily. They must realize, as the British did when London was being destroyed, that sustained operations would paralyze them, not because their will to last it out would fade, but because their ability to fight back would be destroyed by their own confusion.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, November 28

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds testimony of very active and eventful social, affectional and domestic engagements, with a degree of pleasure, but a pronounced tendency to quick-thinking, sharp and clever words, together with rash and reckless behavior, may endanger the entire happy program. There is peril also from physical harm, accidents or "smarty" disputes or arguments.

Those whose birthday it is while having some prospect of moderate success, with swift moves, clever plans and schemes, yet are likely to offset all benefits by rash, tempestuous, hectic and impulsive conduct, which may draw reprisals and resentment, to the point of bodily collisions, with accidents and other regrettable circumstances. With heightened energies under a constructive vibration there may be some worthwhile progress and worthwhile contacts. Be cautious with writings as well as the spoken word.

A child born on this day may have highly stimulated energies and mental faculties, but a tendency to rash, impetuous acts and argumentative speech.

For Monday, November 29

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a mixed one, with some excellent prospects, but these are likely to be reversed or set aside by sudden upheavals, estrangements, changes, uprooting from security and stability, or other unpredictable events. However, influential friends assure popularity and prestige, happy and unshakable with very substantial benefits, gifts or inheritance. But be alert to fraud, mistakes or delusions, particularly in legal matters or personal intrigues.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of surprise, reversals and unexpected change. But these devastating situations may be offset by the substantial support of influential and wealthy friends, to the point of gifts, trusts and inheritances. Personal popularity and prestige are secure, but be wary of fraud or intrigue.

A child born on this day may have much popularity and the aid of powerful friends, even in sudden reversals, trials and sorrows. It should be warned of snares, delusions and fraudulent intrigues or other sinister contacts.

Those who have not followed the farm land situation closely may be surprised to know that land values in this war have increased at just about the same rate that they did in World War I.—Agriculture Secretary Claude R. Wickard.

Diet Deficiencies Among Americans

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
WE ALL more or less have food habits, which we acquired one way or another. Few are strictly and rigidly scientific. I once sat down to a luncheon with a group of physiologists. It was in a hotel

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

and everyone ordered his own. From a scientific standpoint, what these experts ate was pure horror. Most of our food habits are based on prejudice, many formed early in life and can almost be called hereditary. My mother believed cucumbers were bad for her and proclaimed this belief in no uncertain terms, and my father thought tomatoes were poisonous. These prejudices influenced me for many years and prevented my consumption of a dish I now enjoy very much.

R. M. Dorcus, who has made a study of food habits found that 21 per cent of 5,000 persons examined thought meat hard to digest, 50 per cent avoided it because they thought it fattening. As a matter of fact, the easiest thing that man digests, and whether a substance is fattening or not depends on how much of it you eat.

But meat has been called one of the "high emotional foods."

Diet For Average Person

The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council have published lists of diets which they consider yardsticks for scientific dietetic intake. There are several of these lists suited to various people doing work of various degrees of strenuousness, but a general summary for an average person is as follows:

1 pint of milk.
1 serving of meat, fish or poultry.
2 to 3 slices of whole wheat or enriched bread.
2 to 3 tablespoonsful of butter, cream or fortified oleomargarine.
2 servings of vegetables.
2 servings of fruit (one citrus—orange, lemon or grapefruit).
3 to 5 eggs weekly.
On the basis of this as a standard two Philadelphia researchers questioned 85 adult patients, male and female, of various ages, selected at random, about their dietary habits.

They found that very few Americans instinctively select a well balanced diet.
For instance, 40 per cent did not eat enough protein (represented in the dietary by milk, eggs and meat). Seventy-five per cent didn't get enough to eat. 2 per cent got too much. Seventy-four per cent did not get enough water, and only 1 per cent drank too much water. Thirty-four per cent did not eat foods that gave them enough iron (prominent among iron-containing foods are eggs, oatmeal, whole wheat, beans, peas, spinach, almonds). Forty-eight per cent had a deficiency of calcium (calcium-containing foods are cheese, milk, eggs, beans, prunes, carrots).

Deficiency in vitamin intake is estimated all the way from 94 per cent of patients who were not getting enough Vitamin B to 13 per cent who were not getting enough Vitamin C.

Improved General Health
The deficiencies were explained to the patients who in most instances co-operated to correct the deficiencies with a reported improvement in general health.

Such is the story and presumably there are a great many Americans who do not eat a strictly scientific diet, and a few who eat a diet that is so grossly off balance as to injure their health.

But I confess to considerable skepticism in regards to the bad effects of a slightly or somewhat unbalanced diet. Dietitians and nutritionists lean towards being too rigid when they compose their scientific tables. There is nothing which will upset a man's soul like worrying constantly about whether he is eating the right thing.

Ex-Soldier Would Give His Shirt To Be Back

CAMP ADAIR, Ore.—Remember the guy who said, "He wouldn't be a soldier if he didn't gripe?"

The ex-editor of the Camp Adair Sentry, former Tech. Sergeant Edwin Anthony Brown, writes: "Brothers, I'm a civilian now. And am I griping? You think things are tough. . . . You're nuts. . . . Be a civilian for a month and you'd give your shirt to be where you are."

"I went into civilian life and decided not to gripe any more. No more top-kicks, guard detail revile, taps nor mess hall chow."

"Now what have I got? Ration tickets, clothes to buy and alimony to pay. Brothers, remember me and be happy."

Nearly four times as many troops as were moved in the same time in World War I have been carried by rail in the U. S. in this war.

Haile Selassie's Home

To Become Child Refuge

BATH, England.—The home which sheltered Emperor Haile Selassie during his exile from Ethiopia will become a refuge for babies who were bombed out by Nazi aerial attacks.

Selassie moved into the $12,000 residence in 1936 and lived in it most of the time until 1940, when he returned to his native land in the wake of British armies and completed the restoration of his empire.

The place will be converted to philanthropic purposes as soon as the last members of the royal family leave England. The Emperor's daughter, the widowed Princess Tenaghe Work, plans to go home shortly, as will Haile Selassie's third son, Sahle, who has been studying at Bristol university.

Old Time Games Stage Comeback This Christmas

Santa's not going to disappoint you after all. His Yuletide pack may be short of a number of familiar toys, but there will be games that all the family can enjoy together.

A variety of easy-to-learn, quick action parlor games made of non-priority materials, is ready. Sister and brother and the grownups too will forget about limitations on the family car.

Some old favorites like Rook, popular in the horse-and-buggy age, are being revived this Christmas. The game has won favor in the armed forces where a variety of new techniques has been added to increase the difficulty of "not getting hooked."

Pit, the wheat pit speculation game of the Nineties, is another old craze to be revived. The object of this old time trading game is to corner the market on wheat, corn, barley, flax, oats or hay by trading cards representing these grains.

A game of real estate Monopoly and Finance, another of the robbery speculation games, appeal to both family and service men. Sorry, the English game that won popularity during the blitz, is another best seller.

The name Wefup is derived from the first letters of the parts of an airplane which are usually observed in determining identity: Wings, Engines, Fuselage, Tail, Undercarriage, and Peculiarities. The game consists of 54 cards giving silhouette views of Allied and enemy planes. Though it is the toughest and most technical of the war games published for home front consumption, to the amazement of game experts, it has become a best seller.

Guardsman, Nation's Worst Burn Victim, Makes Hospital Exit

(By Associated Press)

BOSTON, Nov. 27. — Constant loser at gun rummy but winner in a battle for survival, Coast Guardsman Clifford Johnson, 22, of Sumner, Mo., who lived through burns of 67 per cent of his body area received in the Coconut Grove disaster a year ago, left City hospital today in convalescence at the Brighton Marine hospital.

"I don't like to leave," he said, glancing at his nurse, Miss Mercy Smith, chief winner in innumerable gin rummy games. "Everybody here has been so good to me. But I figure the Marine hospital is one step closer to recovery."

Johnson left in a wheel chair because of a knee injury recently received in a fall in the hospital's corridor.

Dr. Newton C. Browder, City hospital, paid tribute to Dr. Robert Henry Aldrich, Boston surgeon, whose triple aniline dye burn therapy was used on Johnson, whose recovery was considered as miraculous by medical authorities.

He was given more than 100 transfusions and underwent 30,000 pin-prick skin grafts.

No patient ever before suffered such burns and lived, the doctors said, and added they "learned more from him about the treatment of burns than has ever been learned from any other single patient."

Johnson's weight dropped from 165 to 105 pounds but when he leaves the hospital today he will weigh 135 and will have most of the use of his arms and legs.

U. S. Tests Jap Parachute Flares, Start Forest Fires

SALISBURY, Md., Nov. 27.—The accidental dropping of Japanese-made parachute flares was blamed today for starting several forest fires on the Maryland eastern shore.

Investigating authorities said the parachutes came from United States military planes, and that the chutes had been purchased before the war from the Japanese.

The first parachute dropped Nov. 15 within the Salisbury city limits, but was extinguished before causing damage.

Two forest fires in Dorchester county Thursday were blamed by District Forester Joseph T. Rothrock on similar flares, one of which was seen falling but was partially burned before being recovered.

Finding of the first flare here started an investigation by Army and Navy intelligence, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Maryland state police. It fell on a day during which six forest fires were reported and brought the alerting of the forest service.

Washington Round-up

News and Views, Briefly On What's Going On In Capital

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27. — The senate military committee, spurred by letters from irate parents of servicemen, today scheduled a meeting for next week to investigate the Patton soldier-cuffing incident.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a report submitted to the committee by Secretary of War Stimson, said he had rebuked Lt. Gen. George S. Patton Jr. for "unseemly and indefensible" conduct in upbraiding two hospitalized soldiers during the Sicilian campaign. Eisenhower and Stimson both indicated they considered the case closed.

Members of the senate committee served notice, however, they were not through with the matter.

U. S. FLEET DOUBLED

America's battle fleet, largest in the world, has been doubled in the past 11 months and now numbers 817 fighting ships, including more than 40 aircraft carriers.

Navy Secretary Knox disclosed yesterday 419 ships had been completed in the past 11 months.

The secretary said he hoped the Japanese fleet soon may be forced into action and wiped out by superior American forces.

SUCKER? TO LATIN AMERICANS?

Senate investigators, on the economy trail once again, asked Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of inter-American affairs, for an accounting of funds spent in Central and South America in furthering the "Good Neighbor" policy.

Senator Butler (R-Neb) charged yesterday American money was being spent for "boondoggling" projects in Latin America, saying Uncle Sam has spent or obligated more than $6,000,000,000 there. The republics to the south, Butler commented, either considered this country a "sucker" or distrusted American motives for the spending.

Vice President Wallace called Butler's report a "shocking slur to our South American allies."

Chairman Byard (D-Va) of a senate committee probing government spending said he had asked Rockefeller for a complete accounting of South American spending.

Rockefeller said in an address at an American Legion dinner last night Butler's $6,000,000,000 estimate was "a misrepresentation of the facts." All outlays by government agencies in Latin America during the past three years, including military and naval installations, total less than $600,000,000, Rockefeller added.

"HISTORIC MISTAKE"

A bill repealing the 61-year-old Chinese exclusion act reached President Roosevelt's desk following senate approval. Mr. Roosevelt had termed the exclusion legislation "a historic mistake." The repealing measure substitutes for a flat ban on Chinese immigration a quota under which 105 members of that race would be admitted annually. It also makes Chinese residents of this country eligible for naturalization.

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

Josephine Powers shook her head and side to side. She fumbled with a small purse and drew out a white handkerchief. "No, No! I didn't do anything. Why should I have killed Pete Everard?"

"Because you thought he had used your daughter,"

Romey's voice was very quiet. "Powers started at him in bewilderment, put her hands over her face for a moment, then said sadly: 'My daughter never saw Pete Everard.'"

"Do you deny that Ellen ever saw Hank Knowlton?"

"I never heard her mention his name—"

Romey spoke slowly now. I wondered if he was reasoning it out. He went along: "Your daughter didn't tell you the name of the man who betrayed her. But you'd seen his picture. Hank and Pete were as alike as two peas—"

"On they were!" Pam screamed. "That day at Siboney's—the first time I saw Pete! I thought it was Hank—I thought maybe he wasn't dead after all."

"I said: 'I remember now. You thought it was Hank too, didn't you, Josephine? When I was talking to you at the counter, you were so startled you couldn't listen.'"

Mrs. Powers did not answer. She crouched down in her chair.

Chief Calvin thundered: "Answer Miss Glenn!"

But Romey intervened. "She doesn't have to answer. She told me long ago if only I'd been smart enough to realize. She said Pete had a wasted life and a wasted death. How could anybody but the murderer have known that? Josephine, you killed Pete because you thought he was Ellen's man. You thought all you'd have to do was get him and his kids out of the way and your grandchild would be the Knowlton heir. Then you found out you'd made a mistake."

"You learned Hank Knowlton was also the father of Pam Drury's child—that he'd married Pam. So the first two murders were wasted. You told me so yourself," Romey repeated.

Pam screamed. Josephine moaned.

Romey went on talking to Mrs. Powers, grimly. "You killed Henny Drury. Then you stripped her blue and yellow bathing suit from her dead body, dressed your grandchild in it, and ordered her to dive from the float, and keep on diving until you saw her to swim out to Portville Rock and disappear before anybody got close to her—"

Josephine was crying now—and without any sound.

Suddenly Aunt Carrie began to talk. "Your grandchild had always minded you, Josephine. You thought she always would. But you made a mistake about her too. You brought her up with a dog. You told her he was the son of another Red Ruffus. Her father had given her mother. She never forgave you for killing that dog. See how you blundered?"

"You told your grandchild to wrap that blue and yellow suit around a rock and dump it off Portville Rock where the tides would carry it out through the Sound to the ocean. But the suit was pretty. And little girls are vain. Josephine. The child had been longing to defy you ever since her dog disappeared and you told her not to ask questions. She kept the suit."

Josephine whimpered as if she were in pain. "No, no. Little Jo loved me."

Aunt Carrie's voice was very gentle. "It's no use, Josephine. Little Jo unintentionally betrayed you."

Mrs. Powers broke then.

There was agony in her voice and in her face. "I had to kill Henny. When my poor Ellen was dying, she said her man wouldn't ever have left her, not even for the Drurenstahl girl, if he'd known little Jo was coming. When I found out from the back Henny brought over to show Miss Babcock that Pam Drury was the girl that had stolen Ellen's man from her. I knew I'd never rest till I made her suffer like my Ellen did. It was Pam Drury made my grandchild a—"

Josephine stopped suddenly, froth coming to her lips. She wiped it away with the back of one of those big capable hands that had dealt out death again and again.

"And I'll have to testify against her when Jack's doing his best to send her to the electric chair." I whispered against Dennis' good shoulder.

Peggy is made of sterner stuff. She got down from the desk and went to stand in front of Josephine. "Why did you want to kill my aunt?"

Mrs. Powers looked at her dully. "She knew too much. She'd seen too much. She'd seen little Jo. You didn't believe there was a child in Portville. Your aunt was figuring it out. I was afraid she'd figure it out. I was afraid Henny's death would be wasted too."

Then I asked: "Josephine, why did you wait ten years—why did you go mad suddenly after you'd spent all these years building a place for yourself and for Ellen's child? Isn't there something you can say for yourself?"

Josephine's voice was quiet now, all passion spent. "Thank you, Mrs. Hilda. There's nothing more for me to say—"

Chief Calvin broke in "You've said plenty, Mrs. Powers."

But Josephine went on: "I'm sorry about your dog, Miss Hilda—sorry about Bruce and Miss Babcock. But I had to do it. She talked too much. She'd seen too much. Her voice was thick. An odd look, like pain too terrible to bear went over her face."

Lex Calvin said: "Josephine Powers, in the name of the law and of the power vested in me as chief of police of Havenhurst Village. I arrest you for the willful and violent murder of Peter Everard, of Olive Bevans, and of Henriette Drury, and for felonious assault with intent to kill on the person of Miss Caroline Babcock."

Josephine lurched to her feet and took a step toward Chief Calvin. A menacing step.

The chief rapped: "Can the dramatics, Powers! Handcuff her, Jerry!"

Mrs. Powers put her hands to her face. When she took them away she wore a bitter, twisted smile. She stood swaying for a moment; then she fell in a crumpled heap.

"It's all right, Romey," she murmured. "Cyanide's a good thing to keep on hand."

She was still.

Commodore Knowlton bent and held his old-fashioned watch in front of Josephine's mouth.

"No mist on it," he observed. "She's dead. The case is closed. My grandchild won't be dragged into court, I trust."

"You mean—the one in Portville—you're acknowledging that little Jo is your grandchild?" Peggy asked.

"The daughter of Hank's marriage," the Commodore said stiffly. "The ceremony he went through with the Drurenstahl girl was void; it was bigamous. Ellen Powers was his wife."

"But where is—little Jo?" I asked.

"Rosemary," Pam said after me in a bleak tone.

"Your aunt and I went to Portville today and got little Jo," the Commodore said and for the first time he did not boom or growl. "Your aunt is a remarkable woman, Hilda."

Dennis and I exchanged glances. We knew we'd be exchanging glances all our lives—glances of understanding, of thoughts unspoken and yet shared.

"Does anyone mind if I go home?" Pam asked.

McCoy Slaying Assumes Place With Major Crimes In Ohio

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27.—A triple slaying that wiped out the prominent McCoy family near Washington Court House assumed its place today with Ohio's major crimes.

Criminologists still point to the case of Pearl Bryan at Cincinnati as possibly the most bizarre. But ranking with it are the cases of Anna Hahn, the Cincinnati poison killer; the "Mad Butcher" who killed at least 10 persons in Cleveland's Kingsbury run; the slaying of Theora Hix, for which an Ohio State university professor was executed, and the "full moon" murders at Steubenville.

There are others, but these attracted possibly the most attention. Oddly, one of the others occurred in Fayette county at almost the same location as the McCoy home, where a skayer shot and killed Elmer McCoy, hog breeder, his wife, and daughter, Mildred, Thanksgiving eve.

The first Fayette case developed Dec. 26, 1926, when Charles Halterman and his wife, Clara, were found slain on their farm. A half-brother of Halterman, Leo, was arrested but contended the two were slain while he went to chase chicken thieves. He finally was convicted and died in the electric chair.

Shoe Is Murder Clue

The Pearl Bryan case was steeped in mystery. The headless body of a woman was found Nov. 18, 1895, across the river from Cincinnati in Kentucky and the only hope of identification was a peculiar-sized shoe, three times A. Detectives took it to a Portsmouth shoe factory and from there it was traced to Greencastle, Ind., where they learned it was sold to Pearl Bryan, daughter of an Indiana farmer. This established identification and led subsequently to her association with Scott Jackson, a Cincinnati dental student. Trial evidence showed a relationship between the two and involved Alonzo Walling, a medical student and roommate of Jackson. The two youths were hanged in Kentucky after a court dispute over whether the crime actually was committed.

Theora Hix, a student in Ohio State's medical college, was found shot to death on a pistol range northwest of Columbus in 1928. A long, difficult investigation led to Dr. J. Howard Snook, a professor in the veterinary school who, it was brought out, had associated frequently with the girl. He was convicted of slaying her and died in the electric chair in 1929.

Hahn Poison Case

Anna Marie Hahn, a small, plump and pretty woman of German descent, maintained throughout a long trial her innocence of state charges that she developed the confidence of elderly men to gain their fortunes and then fed them poison. She was convicted specifically of killing Jacob Wagner, 78, and was executed in 1938 at the age of 32.

Police have sought fruitlessly for years to run down a killer who stalked through the shacks and dumps of Kingsbury run to kill and dismember bodies with the skill of a surgeon. Bodies, or parts of them—generally the torso—began showing up periodically in the late 1930's and so thorough were the crimes committed that, save in two instances, the victims could not be identified. One man was arrested and accused of the "torso murders" two years ago. He killed himself in jail.

Possibly the most terrifying of all cases was the "full moon" murders near the Wheeling Steel plant in Steubenville in 1934. A slayer, hiding in deep shadows, shot to kill as men changed shifts at 11:30 p. m. He picked the first night of the full moon, and did so for three months. After firing, he loped away "like a gorilla," witnesses testified.

Declared Insane

The first night, Jan. 30, Fred Melsheimer was slain. Fifty-four days later James Barnett was wounded. Ninety-seven days after the first shooting, Ray Kockendorfer and William Meiser were killed in the moonlight. The following month heavy guards and floodlights sheltered the area and no one was shot. Then on July 28, a man was seen loping away from the area and run down. A pistol was found sewn in this clothing. He was David D'Ascanio. A jury gave him a life sentence and he now is in the Lima hospital for the criminally insane.

One night in 1928 Vernard Fearn, a coal dealer, answered a knock at the door of his home in Canton. A woman waited, asked that he step out, and shot him dead. Police were able only to obtain a not too good description of the assailant and it was printed widely. Shortly afterward Margaret Heckman, sister in her home at Lorain listening to her husband read an account of the story. Then he glanced up and remarked, "that fits you." Mrs. Heckman replied, "It is." Her husband took her toward Canton immediately, but on the outskirts of the city she shot herself to death in the automobile.

Canton Slaying Unsolved

One of the most prominent of farm slayings occurred in Fulton county in 1927. A farmer heard calls for help, called, investigating, found his neighbor, Fred Lehman, laying beside a mail box, wounded. He said he had been shot by chicken thieves and a gunny sack of poultry was found near a chicken house. Then, investigating further, neighbors found Mrs. Lehman shot to death in her bed, her hands folded on her chest. Lehman contended stoutly the thieves must have slain his wife, but a jury decided he did and he is serving a life sentence.

The blast of a shotgun ripped through the window of a breakfast room and killed Mrs. Deuber S. Cable, prominent Canton club woman and wife of a construction official, the night of March 11, 1937. Mrs. Theresa Ludwig, with whom Mrs. Cable's husband admitted association was questioned at length but subsequently released. Mrs. Ludwig was found dead May 10, 1938, under her new automobile in a garage at Conneaut. The slaying of Mrs. Cable never was solved.

"World Dictators" vs Popes Battles Date Back 135 Years

AP Features

Another would-be dictator imprisoned another Pope Pius 135 years ago.

The dictator was Napoleon; the Pope was the personable Pius VII, historic not only for his clash with Napoleon but as the creator of the dioceses of New York, Boston, Charleston, Philadelphia, Bardonia, Richmond and Cincinnati in America.

Like Hitler, Napoleon was trying to keep his enemies (Russians and English) out of Italy. He occupied the papal city of Ancona in October, 1805.

On the spot was Napoleon's General Miollis, counterpart of Hitler's Field Marshal Albert Kesselring in Rome today. As the tragic quarrel grew, Miollis began seizing papal states for France. On Feb. 2, 1808, Miollis seized Rome. Then Napoleon's general in successive steps:

Seized the printing presses, journals and postoffices.

Conducted several cardinals to the frontier.

Banished other cardinals from Rome.

The Pontifical states were annexed to France and the Pontifical flag was lowered from St. Angelo.

Pope Pius retaliated with excommunication for Napoleon, in June 1809.

In the early morning of July 6, the Pope was arrested in the Quirinal. He had two hours to prepare to leave. At 4 a. m. he was started to Savona. He lived there or at Fontainebleau throughout his captivity.

Napoleon Had The Pope

Napoleon's struggle to dominate his captive is history. He wanted the Holy See moved to Paris; he moved in the Vatican archives. Their quarrel over marriage rules, begun when Napoleon sought annulment of the marriage of his brother Jerome to Miss Patterson of Baltimore, extended to Napoleon's proposed divorce of Josephine. He demanded Pius' ring of St. Peter's. Pius sent it to him—broken in two.

But the separate peace that Napoleon had been able to make with Russia failed in 1812. His star waned, and he tried to patch up his differences with the Pope, whose person he had treated considerably. Imprisoned cardinals were freed.

Return To Rome

On Jan. 24, 1814, the Pope's guard announced he would be returned to Rome. The aged Pius VII made his triumphant entry May 24, 1814.

The papal states became a haven for war-uptoed royalty. Among them were the Bonapartes, family of Napoleon, after Waterloo in 1815. Napoleon was exiled and later Pius VII asked permission to send him a chaplain.

Napoleon died in exile in 1821, aged 52; Pius VII outlived him two years, and died in Rome.

How Germany is growing stronger

YOU MAY THINK Germany is growing weaker. But—

In many military respects, she is actually growing stronger. Here's how:

1. As Germany's lines of communication grow shorter, her military might will gather power, like a coiling spring. The Nazi armies that fought so furiously as far from home as Stalingrad and the Caucasus will fight even more furiously as the fighting approaches Poland and Germany proper.
2. Today Germany has 3 times as many combat divisions as she had when she attacked Poland 4 years ago. The divisions lost at Stalingrad have been replaced, and Germany has raised or re-equipped a total of 60 new divisions. All told, Germany has 300 divisions!

3. The Germans now have 35,000,000 war workers in Nazi-dominated lands, as contrasted with 23,000,000 at the start of the war.
4. Germany can make ends meet on industrial manpower. She expects to add 3,000,000 more war workers by Christmas in an all-out mobilization drive.
5. Allied air bombings have been effective, but the vast industrial power of Hitler's Europe is still high.

6. American officers returning from the front say that German prisoners are just as cocky and determined as ever.
 7. German technicians are working feverishly on the development of new and deadlier weapons. One of these—the "magnetic" torpedo—has already begun to take its toll of lives and materials in the Battle of the Atlantic. Another, a rocket gun, has devastating fire power.
- Nobody's trying to scare you. We're going to win this War. But the toughest fighting is still ahead—and War Bond buying must keep pace with the fighting!
- The more men and the more money we can pour in now, the quicker we win. Buy an extra Bond—today!

Sailors Stand Between Mighty Notre Dame And Clean Slate

Clubhouse Notes For YOU

By CHIP ROYAL
AP Features Sports Editor

NEW YORK—There's been quite a kettle of fish stirred up around the football tables because some of the "experts," and Notre Dame's grid opponents, insist on rating the 1943 Irish as the best pigskin performers of all time.

Coach Frank Leahy won't talk about the team until the season is over.

"It's terrible unfair to flout that sort of thing in front of the young fellows nowadays," he says. "They are engaged in much more important work than winning a football game."

That's the way the Irish mentor left it after the Army game. But not Lt. Comdr. Edgar E. (Rip) Miller of Annapolis and Lt. Col. Earl (Red) Blaik of West Point. As long as the cake has been sliced let's all have a piece of it. Maybe we can get Leahy to take a slice later on.

First, Rip Miller, one of the famed seven mules of the undefeated 1924 Notre Dame has the floor.

"Notre Dame could have licked any team that ever played football amateur or pro, the day it beat Annapolis."

"That 1924 team, when we had the Four Horsemen, was my original pride," smiles Rip. "but I washed them out after 1920. Then I thought that last team of Rock's was the best, but players improve as the years go on, and now as an old Notre Dame man I am proud to say that this team tops them all."

Red Blaik echoes the same sentiments by saying:

"I've seen a lot of Notre Dame football teams. I always thought that the unbeaten '29 and '30 Rockne eleven were the best of all time. But this year's team has got them all beat."

Now just a minute boys. We're next. And, what better team could anyone nominate for all-time greatness than the Boston College Eagles of 1940?

There's something for Mr. Leahy to answer. Which team does he rate as the greatest? He enched both. As a result of his work with B. C. Frank went back to his beloved South Bend Campus.

Ah, that Boston College team of 1940. There was a really super-duper outfit.

Remember, Mr. Leahy? You had more than one good line and a set of backs on that undefeated Sugar Bowl team. When you sent in your second set of line-men, you didn't have to yank them and hurry the first line back as you did here in the Army game.

When those 1940 Eagles were playing, there never was any question about the quality of the reserves. You had at least two stand-out players for each spot.

Remember, Mr. Leahy? Ask any sports writer about the All-America nominations in 1940. Practically every member of the first-string Boston College eleven received votes. Even some of the so-called reserves, too.

What football players they were! Remember such backs as Mike Holovak, Charley O'Rourke, Henry Toczowski, Monk Maziacki, Adolph Kiesel, Wally Boudreau and Mickey Connolly, just to mention a few?

Remember that line of Gene Goodreault, Henry Woronick, Joe Manzo, Al Morro, Joe Zabalski, George Kerr, and all-America center Chet Gladchuk?

Remember those reserves of Eddie Zabalski, Don Currian, Alex Latachuk, John Yaukoos, Rocco Canale, Leo Struminski, Steve Levantis, Al Fiorentino, Joe Repko and Walter Dubzinski, among others?

If they rate this year's Notre Dame football team as one of the greatest, what would you call that 1940 Boston College team?

How about it, Mr. Leahy? Which team was the greatest?

About 200,000 cans are being collected monthly in the national tin can salvage drive.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—The statistics we'd really like to see on today's Army-Navy game concerns the amount of gas and rubber burned by folks living within the ten-mile limit who qualified for tickets.

They can't ride the subway to Michie stadium. — Cas Mylinski, Army leader, has been captain three of the six years he has played football—two years at Steubenville, O. High school . . . the Navy squad is scheduled to see "stars on ice" tonight, which isn't an omen.

Either they'll see stars or put the game on ice. . . story is that Navy figures to do better on a wet field than on a dry one.

FIGHT, TEAM, FIGHT

When the Army-Navy series was interrupted in 1894 for a few years, the recommendation to the secretaries of war and navy for discontinuing the competition said: "The practice in peace of these operations which most resemble war must be condemned, notwithstanding the fact that they are manifestly beneficial as military training."

Lieut. Tony Hinkle, the Great Lakes coach, apparently is trying to out-Leahy pessimist Frank Leahy of Notre Dame. After his sailor scouts had seen the Irish, Hinkle said: "From their reports it appears no play or ball carrier we got will gain an inch 'of ground against the Irish."

Navy's guards are George Brown and Ben Chase. Both starred for Hoover High in San Diego. Brown

Comparative scores against Notre Dame and Penn notwithstanding, Army holds a decided edge over Navy in total yards both on offense and defense. The same holds for rushing. Army, incidentally, averages 197 pounds along the line to Navy's 195.

Among the Army linemen who have been outstanding this season are Tackles Frank Merritt and Joe Stanowicz and End John Hennessey. Merritt has lived up to his pre-season notices, so has the 218-pound Stano wicz who played the full 60 minutes against Notre Dame.

Tackle Battle

Coach Blaik was strong for Merritt at the start of the campaign but now Stanowicz has entered the All-America picture. Navy has fine tackles in Don Whitmore, who starred for Alabama in 1942 and made the AP All-America third team, and Ed Sprinkle who, some say, is even better than Whitmore.

Saturday's game might be a deciding factor for one of the All-America tackle berths. Jim White of Notre Dame seems like a certain bet for the other post.

The center of the Army and Navy lines will be something to watch. Both teams have veterans at the snapper-back and guard positions. There's Army's center Cas Mylinski, and Guards Ed Murphy and Al McCorkle who like Merritt and Hennessey, will be playing their final games for the Cadets.

Mylinski turned in one of the best games of his career against Frank Leahy's invaders from the mid-west when he played 58 minutes without relief.

FOOTBALL CURTAIN LOWERED IN EAST

Three Bowl Bids. Eastern Championship At Stake In Games Today

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 27. — Three bowl bids, the Eastern championships and Notre Dame's hopes for a perfect season hang in the balance today as the college football season grinds to a close.

Both sides of the New Orleans Sugar bowl still are in the to-be-invited department as is Texas' foe in the Cotton bowl.

Army and Navy demand top billing from ocean to ocean when they have so-so clubs, but this year, in a wartime atmosphere that has shuttled the game to West Point and limited attendance to 16,000, the interest is world wide and the football strictly top drawer. The eastern tie is an added prize for the winner.

Notre Dame shoots for its first unbeaten, untied records since 1930 before an all-Navy throng of 22,000 at Great Lakes. The Iowa Seahawks meet Minnesota in their finale. Two unbeaten teams clash as Southwestern Louisiana faces Randolph Field. A post season bid is likely for the victor and possibly for both.

Georgia-Georgia Tech, meaning Johnny Cook vs an injured Eddie Prokop, may hold the answer to another bowl riddle. North Carolina plays Virginia. Other southern feuds include Texas Christian-Southern Methodist, Southwestern Texas-Rice and Camp Lejeune-Jacksonville Navy.

Southern Cal has its final Rose bowl pre against cross-town rival U. C. L. A., Del Monte pre-flight takes on California and Oklahoma meets Nebraska. A Lafayette-Lehigh encore and Brooklyn's finale at Rutgers serve to ring down the curtain.

U. S. Military academy mules must combat an aerial weapon of 150 pounds in Hal Hamburg, the midshipmen's 5 foot 9 air-minded coach from Lenoire, Ark.

Ask any of the 140,000 football fans who saw Army against Pennsylvania and Notre Dame and they'll tell you without batting an eyelash that one thing the West Pointers lack is coordination in combat separates New Guinea and western New Britain.

Land From Boats

Troops and tanks were landed from boats near the Piva river mouth on the upper end of the six-mile American beachhead on Emprass Augusta Bay, Bougainville, enemy 75mm guns on a nearby island caused some casualties and damaged some of the ships which had blasted the way for the landings.

After a 63-ton bombing by American planes, Bonis airfield on Bougainville's northern tip was accounted to have joined Kahili, Kars and Ballale in the southern Bougainville sector as knocked-out Japanese air bases.

The Chinese high command held out the promise of one of China's biggest victories of the war with complete encirclement of 100,000 Japanese in Hunan province. It said more than 5700 enemy troops were killed in the Changteh of the bitter "rice bowl" fighting.

Chungking, in confirming the Allied raid on Formosa, said China-based 14th U. S. air force bombers had attacked the Japanese air base at Shingchiu and destroyed 31 Jap planes with a single American loss.

Air blows by U. S. and British forces at Japanese installations and shipping all along the Burma coast and into Thailand, were described by Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten in a New Delhi communique.

Burglar Was Persistent,
But Left Empty-Handed

LISBON, Nov. 27.—The sheriff's office is investigating the ransacking of the Frank Conn home, near here, by an intruder who, frightened away twice by the family, returned a third time and ransacked the home while the mother and a small boy slept in adjoining rooms.

Awakened twice Friday night by the barking of the family dog, Frank Conn and his son, Alva, discovered a light moving about the barn. Both times the intruder ran to a car and fled toward town as the farmer and his son approached the barn.

At 5:30 a. m. Conn and his son left for Lisbon to go to work and the farmer's daughter and daughter-in-law went to the barn to do the milking, leaving the older Mr. Conn and the sons two-year-old child asleep in the house. While the women were in the barn, the intruder returned and searched upstairs and lower floor rooms. Cries of the child awakened by the noise brought the others to the house while the intruder slipped away unobserved.

FINDLAY, Nov. 27.—Connie Jean Baum, five, was injured fatally when she fell out of an automobile driven by her uncle, Donald Baum, 17, and Robert Baum, 13, and was run over by a passing machine.

So do the German counter-attacks in Russia, Italy and the Aegean. Proof of ability to conduct a steadfast defense would be Hitler's first necessity if he intended to negotiate.

But the men who are fighting Germany testify to her continued strength. They do not feel that November, 1943, is quite the same as November, 1918. Many have expected a climax this fall; many more are sure that it is not far away; but still there seems little valid reason to doubt such men as Roosevelt, Churchill and Bracken, who also might agree that anything can happen, but who profess to count only on more and bloodier battles for the immediate future.

Senate Committee
Asks Explanation
Of Patton Incident

country of the soldier cutting incident until Eisenhower's headquarters later made available the information that disciplinary action had been taken against Patton.

The committee asked also for information as to any other incidents of this nature in which Patton might have been involved in which any other staff officer might have been guilty of the same conduct. Eisenhower's report was the first official disclosure Patton had upbraided two new patients, instead of one.

One senator attributed the committee's inquiry into this aspect of the affair to an avalanche of mail from parents who demanded to know if Patton was accustomed to such conduct and if that was what might be expected of other American generals.

Eisenhower explained in his report that he personally had investigated incidents in which Patton had upbraided two men, one of whom had a temperature at the time, and had "cuffed" one so that his helmet rolled off.

Eisenhower said Patton had apologized to the men involved and to the officers of every division of the Seventh army, who in turn relayed the apology to their men.

His investigation convinced him, Eisenhower said, that the men themselves felt Patton had done a splendid overall job in his driving direction of the victorious Seventh army in Sicily and that "no great harm had been done by his outbursts of temper."

Asserting Patton had been greeted with "thunderous applause" by his men on subsequent appearances, Eisenhower indicated the could not afford to lose a man of "unquestioned value as commander of an assault force."
